

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

February 20, 2006 - Technology Law Group Expands

Washington, D.C.-based law firm opens Oklahoma City office

Technology Law Group, LLC, (www.tlgdc.com) is pleased to announce Greg Taylor, Esq., formerly Vice President and General Counsel of Matrix Telecom, Inc., has joined the Washington, D.C.-based firm. Mr. Taylor will represent clients involved in the full range of telecommunications transactional, regulatory and litigation issues.

“The mission of this firm has always been to provide the best available legal advice and services to competitive telecommunications and technology companies.” Our decades of experience and focus on telecommunications matters and our rigorous analysis of legal issues, enables us to provide highly creative approaches to complex transactional, regulatory and litigation issues says Neil Ende, founding and senior partner of Technology Law Group. Ende adds, “Expanding outside the beltway will enhance our ability to understand the needs of our diverse national client base and to interact directly with our clients in their own backyard.”

“The significant presence of telecommunications and technology companies in Oklahoma, Texas and Missouri creates a real need for the specialized and unique knowledge and approaches that TLG brings,” says Greg Taylor. As a former TLG client, I have witnessed first hand TLG’s uniquely creative approaches to legal and business issues as well as their ability to succeed meet our business needs in matters that other “telecom” firms would not even take on. I am confident that my years of experience in the telecommunications industry, and the Oklahoma City marketplace, will strengthen the TLG team.”

Mr. Taylor can be reached at the firm’s new office in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma (405.694.4747; gtaylor@tlgdc.com).
